The choice was made for a legal status that aligns with the values of the social and solidarity economy, where it is the individual rather than capital that is at the heart of the project. Citizens, associations, companies, and local authorities can become associates of the cooperative by purchasing social shares.

What is the social capital of a cooperative?

All subscribed social shares constitute the capital of the cooperative. It ensures the solidity of the organization and allows the cooperative to be established, forming a necessary guarantee and investment fund for its creation.

What is a social share?

It represents ownership. Pôle européen du chanvre is a SCIC SAS : a public interest cooperative society with Simplified Joint-Stock and variable capital. The purchase and redemption of shares are not subject to market laws. Taking a share in the cooperative signifies a significant commitment to supporting the Pôle européen du chanvre project, particularly during its creation phase.

Who can subscribe to social shares?

Citizens, associations, local authorities, companies, and employees: all individuals and legal entities.

What rights and obligations are associated with social shares?

Subscribing to shares commits one to becoming a 'co-owner' of an ambitious and innovative project. Each associate has one vote, regardless of the number of shares owned. Ownership of a share automatically entails adherence to the statutes, internal regulations, and decisions of the General Assembly. Associates are only liable for losses up to the amount of their contributions.

Remuneration of shares:

In accordance with the statutes, surpluses are allocated to the legal reserve and a statutory reserve to closely adhere to the principles of non-profit management that drive the various stakeholders of the project.

What are the withdrawal terms for associates?

An associate can withdraw at any time by resigning from their association, upon the associate's death, or by exclusion decided by the General Assembly in case of material or moral prejudice caused by the associate to the SCIC. The repayment period for shares is 5 years, unless early repayment is decided by the Cooperative Council.

What are the terms for the repayment of social shares?

The repayment of social shares is made at their nominal value, subject to any potential losses, which would be deducted proportionally if applicable.
